“RENIER COULD HAVE SAID ‘WE CAN’T DO THAT.’

Renier Construction had just finished our logistics warehouse only five months after groundbreaking. We were thrilled with their work, but there was one problem: business had gone so well during construction that we’d filled the 50,000-square foot warehouse before it was even completed.

We had already made plans for a second phase, a 40,000-square foot addition, but its construction wasn’t scheduled to start for another few years. When we looked at our full warehouse and at our projections for the future we had to ask ourselves, “What are we waiting on?” We decided to go ahead with the expansion immediately.

And Renier was right there with us, working hand-in-glove. They had Phase II of construction in full swing within a week.

I have a lot of respect for Renier. They could’ve said ‘we can’t’—‘that’s not according to schedule, we’d need more time,’—

BUT ‘CAN’T’ ISN’T THE WAY THEY WORK.”
