This year has been filled with upheaval for businesses and their employees, but many companies with strong cultures have been able to maintain their corporate camaraderie.

You can see that in our annual list of Central Ohio's Best Places to Work, which this year features many familiar faces of companies that have been on the list multiple times in quieter years.

Columbus Business First is proud to keep our tradition going of honoring the region's Best Places to Work. The region's original and longest-running workplace awards program is now in its 16th year.

The honorees are listed below, alphabetically by category.

We'll reveal their rankings in print this fall.

If you take to social media to talk about the awards, use the hashtag #Biz1stBPTW so everyone can follow along.

The Best Places to Work program is open to any company or organization with a Central Ohio office with at least 10 full-time employees. The honorees are determined through workplace satisfaction surveys administered independently by Omaha, Neb.-based Quantum Workplace.

The awards are being handed out in five categories: Extra large companies with at least 250 local employees; large companies with 100 to 249 employees; medium companies with 50 to 99 local employees; small companies with between 25 and 49 workers; and micro companies with 10 to 24.
